SCENIC SALEM

A portrait painter, a vital personality, an artist who is truly great—this is Cecilia Beaux. Her honors have been many, for her portraits, some of which may be found in the Metropolitan and the Luxembourg, are beautifully done. A copy of her self-portrait occupies the opposite page. The original hangs in the Uffizi Gallery.

Judge Florence E. Allen, of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, is the first woman to hold this highly respected office. Her career has been a series of unusual events. Miss Allen was assistant Berlin correspondent of the New York Musical Courier, before she practiced law in Cleveland, Ohio. The first woman federal judge was also the first woman Justice of the Ohio State Supreme Court, and the first woman to receive an LL.B. from the University of New York. She has led the way for future women lawyers and judges.

MRS. W. A. McCANLESS

FLORENCE MOORE McCANLESS

Daughter of
MRS. W. A. McCANLESS
SOUTH BOSTON, VIRGINIA
Candidate for Bachelor of Science

This competent senior, who can bake a pound cake fit for a king and make a dress worthy of Vogue, was certainly welcome at Salem with her four-wheeled "Archie." With spectacles perched on her nose and bacteriology books before her, she is a serious student, but when she giggles—you wonder—does she have a double personality?

- Freshman: Cornell University.
- Sophomore: Rollins College
- Junior: Psychology Club, Home Economics Club.
- Senior: I. R. S. Council, Vice-President of Home Economics Club Psychology Club.

MARGARET FRENCH McLEAN

DOROTHY RAPP MOORE

Daughter of
MRS. C. A. MOORE

THOMASVILLE, NORTH CAROLINA

Candidate for Bachelor of Music

Easy-going, home-going Dot never won a cup for speediness of speech, but undoubtedly is a promising radio artist. Just mention snow to her. You'll be sure to get an enthusiastic response to this cold subject, but as to jokes, well, that's a different story.

Freshman: Glee Club.

Sophomore: Y. W. C. A. Cabinet, Glee Club, French Club.

Junior: Glee Club.

Senior: Club Editor "Sights and Insights" Staff, Glee Club.

LOIS ADALENE MOORES

Daughter of
MRS. M. F. MOORES

WINSTON-SALEM, NORTH CAROLINA

Candidate for Bachelor of Music

Bach, Chopin, harmony, theory—these are to Lois. May she, with her tranquility, reticence and musical talent, find happiness and success, as she seems destined to. Her small stature, attractive face, and demure manner add to the charm of this winsome girl.

Junior: Glee Club, Psychology Club.

Senior: Glee Club.

JUNE ESTELLE MORRIS

Daughter of
MRS. J. H. MORRIS

WINSTON-SALEM, NORTH CAROLINA

Candidate for Bachelor of Arts

Her pleasing personality, winning smile, and refreshing beauty make June the June everyone likes. With dignity and reserve she meets every situation, and with characteristic ability performs her tasks.

Sophomore: French Club.

Junior: May Day Pageant, History Club, French Club, House Committee.

Senior: Order of Scorpion, Freshman Week Committee, Student Self-Government Association, Staff of "Sights and Insights," History Club, Psychology Club, House Committee.

MARTHA NEAL

Daughter of
MRS. S. T. NEAL

Senior: Business Manager of "Sights and Insights," Basketball Manager, Athletic Council, Basketball Team.

FRANCES HILL NORRIS

Daughter of
MRS. G. C. NORRIS
RALEIGH, NORTH CAROLINA
Candidate for Bachelor of Arts

Poised and dignified, or talkative and friendly, Frances Hill is a force with men in spite of her diminutiveness. Maybe it's her tip-tilted nose, or, her cherub-like appearance, or her delightful character, but we surely find her attractive.

Freshman: St. Mary's.

Sophomore: St. Mary's.

Junior: Riding Club, Swimming Team, Basketball Team, Tennis Team, Home Economics Club.

Senior: Tennis, Riding, Swimming Team, Basketball Team.

NORMA ELOIS PADRICK

MARY ISABELLE RICHARDSON

Daughter of
MRS. J. M. RICHARDSON
WINSTON-SALEM, NORTH CAROLINA
Candidate for Bachelor of Arts

To quietness, reserve, and modesty, add sterling worth. Isabel is the only answer. That she likes to read is evidenced by the number of books and magazines found on her desk. History and music are her special interests.

Sophomore: Glee Club.

Junior: Glee Club, History Club.

Senior: History Club.

MARGARET ELIZABETH SCHWARZE

Daughter of
MRS. E. SCHWARZE
WINSTON-SALEM, NORTH CAROLINA
Candidate for Bachelor of Arts

Congenial, sincere, serene, efficient, Margaret is an invaluable member of both the class of '35 and '36. She is a true artist who with a violin and bow is able to entertain and inspire.

INEZ FRANCES TEMPLEMAN

Daughter of
MRS. S. H. TEMPLEMAN

WINSTON-SALEM, NORTH CAROLINA

Candidate for Bachelor of Arts

Inez is small in stature but a big asset to any group! The piquant features of this miss are usually framed in a smile, as she cheers us with her gay chatter. Inez, an apt student of history, knows much of battles, treaties, and dates—especially dates.

Sophomore: History Club.

Junior: Alpha Iota Pi, History Club.

Senior: History Club.

ELIZABETH CHURCHILL TUTTLE

Daughter of
MRS. A. F. TUTTLE
LEAKEVILLE, NORTH CAROLINA

RUTH ELEANOR WOLFE

Daughter of
MRS. HENRY WOLFE

WINSTON-SALEM, NORTH CAROLINA

Candidate for Bachelor of Music

Ruth, the industrious lady of the music hall, is most often found with fingers busy at the keyboard. Her recital, a brilliant success, was evidence of real musical talent. She is capable and willing, friendly and sincere.

Freshman: Glee Club, Home Economics Club.

Sophomore: Glee Club, Home Economics Club.

Junior: Glee Club.

Senior: Glee Club, History Club, Psychology Club.

CLASS POEM

One of the heroines of Greek legend was Galatea, the stone statue who came to life under the skillful and loving hands of her sculptor. For four years, we have thought with one mind, sung with one voice, and worked with both hands for the betterment of our class. Do you wonder that this class should have come to life under our hands, and should be to us a definite personality, scintillating and absorbing, which we will always remember and love?

OUR GALATEA

We had individual treasures,
Crystal talents, hours of gold,
Costly efforts, trinket pleasures,
All of which we might have sold.
But instead we threw together
These, our jewels, and then builded
From the gleaming pile a statue,
Solid, strong, and deftly gilded.

On the sparkling, graceful figure
We inscribed our own impressions;
On her face we traced a semblance
Of our faces and expressions.

She was ours for we had made her!
When she glistened, we were proud.
But we were not quite contented
With our image, 'til endowed
With a silvery spirit-laughter,
A miraculous creation
Of our own exultant spirits
In eternal combination.

A radiant girl, all gaily dressed,
With us she now departs;
And that quick beating in her breast
Was taken from our hearts.

OUR PAST

Robert Browning has said, "'tis not what men does which exalts him, but what man would do!"; therefore judge us not on the merit of the seemingly petty triumphs here recounted. Rather leaf through the pages of this yearbook, and read of the great women whom we would emulate. Do not see the apparent triviality of our school record in its relation to the work of the world. Try and appreciate the youthful enthusiasm, the loyalty, the sincerity, the love, the devotion, and perhaps the sacrifices that have gone into these four college years, and account them worthy qualities to carry on the business of life.

In the early fall of 1932, a very worried and very bewildered Freshman class was traditionally standing at the portal, the cynosure of many skeptical glances from the upper-classmen. We admit it rather shamefacedly, because we fancy you would never have guessed that these worldly-wise, mature Seniors, whose pictures you have just seen, sprang from such humble beginnings. The evolutionary process, although a happy one, has not been an easy one; so when I describe only the high spots that are stamped so indelibly on our hearts, let's not forget the dark discouragement and bitter defeats that have had their share in the molding. September, 1932, was one of those sinister periods, when the struggle seemed so hopeless. We had the difficult job of putting about three hundred and fifty names with three hundred and fifty faces. Mary Penn looked exactly like "Pat" Padrick, and the Price twins remained an unsolved enigma to the Freshman class, as did the intricacies of Trigonometry and the collateral reading for European History.

Our first public appearance we made in the Junior-Freshman wedding, when we successfully married "Bim" Gump to the widow Zander. Next we won the prize for the best performance stunt night, and furthermore, sang so lustily that we were awarded first place in the song contest. We wondered why we were not besieged with contracts, but since none were forthcoming, we turned instead to a social success in the Freshman picnic for the Juniors.

As Sophomores we were cold and calculating, or so we hoped, dragging frightened Freshmen ruthlessly up before the righteous Sophomore court when their only offense had been not to make violent love to the willow tree as directed. Then, when the culprits were allowed their ten minutes of sweet revenge, we ate soap and shoe-polish on soggy saltines with never a whimper. The Juniors were forced to share the Hockey Championship Cup with us. From the frying pan of collateral reading, we jumped into a veritable fire of Sophomore English. Although carrying eighteen and nineteen hours of work, we found time for voice culture and won the prize for the best banquet song. Indeed, we even did some good work in basketball and gave the Seniors a royal May morning breakfast.

By our Junior year, we were poised, sophisticated untouchables with social privileges that covered two pages in the handbook. As the Seniors marched to chapel each morning, we made mental measurements of the particular cap and gown that we thought might fit and smiled to ourselves in a very superior fashion. That diabolical adjective, "lovesick," could never have been applied to us. In spite of our valiant fighting on the athletic field, I must admit, we won nothing. Indeed, we confined our victories to society and the stage; were feted by the Freshmen at a very delightful banquet; made an overwhelming hit as nari-tones and prima-lunatics in an original opera, "The Ring of the Need-a-Lung," and were accorded the supreme and unique honor of having the Junior-Senior at the Country Club, with our favorite trustees as hosts and hostesses. A fitting climax it was to a glorious year.

Came September, 1934, and we burned milady Frivolity at the stake, literally and figuratively, and substituted black caps and gowns for gay reds and yellows. The solemn note had struck, and we became awe-inspiring Seniors, shouldering the main responsibility of the extra-curricular activities. Our privileges increased by leaps and bounds. As Seniors we did all the things we had longed to do: set masculine hearts afire at Dr. and Mrs. Rondthaler's Senior Dinner, held Senior Vespers, caroled lustily at Christmas time, and laughed gaily, though squirming uncomfortably inside, as Dean Vardell made jokes at our expense at the Christmas party. As socially elite, we were entertained in royal style by the Sophomores and Juniors, and as able stage luminaries, we gave another great and grand opera, "Robinson's Trouseau."

In spite of the glorification here set down, we were not social lions, nor marvelous athletes, nor unrivaled actresses, nor outstanding scholars, when compared with the truly great. In all earnestness, though, we worked whole-heartedly and sincerely for Salem, giving our best. Our ideals and aspirations are worthy; credit us with these, and you have paid the supreme tribute.

OUR FUTURE

It is the year 1945. Come all you readers, and stand with me in a spacious marble corridor of the Salem Art Gallery of Famous Women. Before you, on pedestals, stand delicately chiseled busts. It is difficult even for me, credulous as I am, to believe what I am about to state, but nevertheless, it is fact. These sculptured representations upon which we gaze in admiration and awe are likenesses of my old classmates who graduated with me long, long ago in the early summer of 1935. Believe it or not, each and every member of the class has succeeded admirably in her chosen career.

Before proceeding with you down the hall of fame, I should like to explain that this handsome memorial building was presented to the college by Senator Margaret McLean, stateswoman and orator, who has made her home in Washington, D. C. Now, let us view in order these wonderful works of art.

The first bust is that of Frances Adams, dietitian of the Temple University Hospital in Philadelphia.

Here is Martha Binder who is married now, and happily settled in South Carolina, where banks and bankers have replaced her interests in "Y" Cabinets and Latin.

That smiling marble countenance belongs to Grace Carpenter, famous horsewoman, whose equally famous mare, Cup-cake, won the pot at this year's Kentucky Derby.

Next to Grace is Rachel Carroll. Her family and friends are very proud of the fact that she has been appointed state archivist.

After Rachel, you see the bust of Josie Chase, who immediately after graduation became the wife of a wealthy Atlanta broker.

The slim face there is none other than that of Sarah Clancy. She has amassed a fortune from her Toothpick Tonic, a reducing process which is quite the vogue.

Helen Davis is national campaign manager for the Democratic party in the coming November election.

Next we see a likeness of Mary Elizabeth Dobbins, better known as Lady Sherlotta Holmes. Beside her is Louise Gaither, her partner in the Society of Successful Sleuths.

Then, proceeding, admire the marble bust of Elizabeth Gray, prominent club woman, whose husband is a rising young banker in Mount Airy.

Edna Higgins comes next. She studied first in England, but is now an instructor at Columbia University.

And after Edna comes Rebecca Hines, Metropolitan opera star, who broadcasts nightly over N.B.C.

Next we see the bust of "Libby" Jerome, of New York City, who is designing costumes for Broadway shows.

Across from "Libby" is Sara Johnston, wife of the President of Davidson College.

Here we see Mildred Krites, who has recently completed her book, "Mathematical Circles."

Julia Lee Little, the globe trotter, is in Europe enjoying high towers.

Next comes the bust of Florence McCanless, the wife and partner of a noted doctor in Winston-Salem.

Dorothy Moore has taken Ann Leaf's place and is playing in the Paramount Theatre in New York.

For the past several years, Lois Moores has filled the position of instructor of music at her Alma Mater.

After Lois, we see the smiling likeness of June Morris, a famous dancer who is appearing in the production, "Whirligigs."

The next figure is Martha Neal who recently, with her world-famous partner, made a flight to the South Sea Islands.

As joint owners of the Allan Chevrolet Company in Raleigh, Frances Hill Norris and husband have become quite well-to-do.

Elois Padrick is living in New York, where she is rehearsing for her next stage production.

The next bust is that of Mary Penn, State Legislator from Tennessee.

Next in line is the bust of Cokey Preston, recently judged "Miss America" in Atlantic City. She seems to be in a fair way of becoming "Miss Universe."

Isabelle Richardson, who is doing social welfare work in Winston-Salem, is still in a quandary over her two favorite suitors.

And here is a portrait statue of Margaret Schwarze, who is traveling in Palestine with her father and husband, noted archaeologists.

Anne Taylor, who is living in New Orleans now, has been chosen Queen of the Mardi Gras.

Inez Templeman spends her time flying from coast to coast acting as field secretary for the National Red Cross.

The striking countenance there belongs to Betty Tuttle, who for the past year has been posing for the artist who does covers for McCall's.

Here we have Ann Vann, the Russian correspondent for the "New York Times."

OUR FUTURE

This statue is of Anne Vaughn, a Home Economics teacher who takes time to win blue ribbons with her famous up-side-down pineapple cake.

The young woman next is Fraulein Ina Wagner, owner of a much-patronized chain of beauty shops.

The next is Margaret Wall, a famous doctor at Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore.

The next bust is of Margaret Ward, who is president of a select girls' school in Virginia.

There we see an excellent likeness of Emma D. Wargo, who is employed by the Macmillan Company.

"Babbie" Way, the leading bacteriologist of the United States, has just made a tour to the shore of Lake Michigan in search of Bacillus X.

The healthy statue beyond "Babbie" is Jane Williams, who is happy as assistant professor of math at Salem College.

The last is Ruth Wolfe, who is a concert pianist appearing in all the largest cities of America.

Friends, at last we have come to the end of our tour of familiar names and faces. As a tribute to the class of '35, let us take off our hats to a group of young women who, after graduation, went out into the world refusing to become mere nonentities. Instead, each of these girls has truly won her pedestal of distinction in this gallery of famous women.

OUR GIFT TO YOU

STATE: North Carolina

COUNTY: Forsyth

CITY: Winston-Salem

To whom it may concern:

SECTION I

We, the class of 1935, being in our right minds, with full possession of our faculties, being about ready to leave this collegiate center for the cold, cheerless, job-hunting world, do hereby declare this to be our last will and testament.

SECTION II

To the Classes

We, the class of 1935, do bequeath:

To the Juniors, our efforts toward staid and dignified conduct, along with Louisa Wilson Bitting Building, hoping that they will enjoy its peace and quiet.

To the Sophomores, our little sisters, the hope that they will cast aside their childish ways and become true college women.

To the Freshmen, this thought:

Long and hard may be the way,

But there's always graduation day.

To the Class of 1939, our colors, gold and black, in the hope that they will wear and cherish them with as much pride and loyalty as we.

SECTION III

To the Students

We, Mary Penn and Cokey Preston, bequeath a part of our ability to write comic operas (who knows, we'll probably need the other part) to whosoever has the time or energy and knows how to put the wrong words to the right song.

I, Rachel Carroll, bequeath my quiet and demure manner to Leila Williams, in the hope that she will hereby conduct herself accordingly.

We, Jane Williams, Ann Vann and Anne Taylor, bequeath to Mr. Curlee a new pencil sharpener. We fear the wear and tear on the old one has been too much this year. Besides, McArn Best and Dorothea Rights will want to use it next year.

We, Frances Adams and Martha Neal, leave our annual troubles to next year's staff with a bit of advice, "Just grin and bear it."

I, Dorothy Moore, leave a bright lantern to the music students, who, like me, are afraid of the dark, namely, Wilda Mae Yingling, and Tick Fraley. This lantern they can carry to the music hall at night while singing in a loud voice, so that nothing will get them.

I, Florence McCannless, leave my ability to knit, and also the art of making handkerchiefs to Jane Crow.

We, Josie Chase and Julia Lee Little, leave our art collection to Madeline Smith, Bessie Lou Bray and

OUR GIFT TO YOU

Tee Little for inspiration and guidance when we're not here to advise them.

I, Isabelle Richardson, leave my ability to pack and leave in thirty minutes to Lou Freeman, who can never make up her mind.

We, Frances Hill Norris, Ina Wagner, Inez Templeman and Mildred Krites, leave our places on the back row in chapel to Lois Torrence, Dorothea Rights and Marianna Hooks, the shortest members of the Junior Class.

I, Grace Carpenter, leave Cramer Percival a Jew's harp on which to play, "for all we know, we may never meet again."

I, Margaret McLean, leave my winning personality, efficiency and scholastic ability to the next Student Government President.

We, Betty Tuttle, Margaret Ward and Pat Padrick, leave a copy of our original book, "How to Be Popular" (based on our own experiences at Salem), to future generations.

I, Margaret Wall, leave my rapid "charge ahead" walk to Margaret Sears, in the hope that it will help her to get to Chapel Hill if the trains and buses stop running.

I, Martha Ann Binder, bequeath to Ethel Highsmith my favorite English books, along with my original ideas for short stories.

We, Louise Gaither, Rebecca Hines and June Morris, leave our ability to get to class on time after practice teaching to whoever may need a few extra minutes.

SECTION IV

We, the Class of 1935, bequeath:

To Miss Riggan and Miss Lawrence, appreciation for their care of us and a rest from these labors.

To Dr. and Mrs. Rondthaler, our love and loyalty.

SECTION V

To Salem College

To our Alma Mater, we leave sincere devotion and the wish of endless successful years.

All the rest and residue of our property, whatsoever, of what nature, kind and quality, not herein disposed of, we give to Miss Lawrence for the benefit of future classes.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and affixed my seal this ninth day of December, nineteen hundred and thirty-four, anno Domini.

MARIETTA WAY, Testator.

Signed, sealed, published, and declared by Marietta Way, the testator, for the class of nineteen hundred and thirty-five as their last will and testament in the presence of us, who, at her request, and in the presence of each other, have hereunto subscribed our names as witnesses.

MARY PENN, President,
ELIZABETH TUTTLE, Secretary.

The foremost woman golfer of America is Miss Virginia Van Wie, who has won the National Woman's Golf Tournament three successive years. She typifies the admirable sportswoman of today, excellent in golf but interested in other sports, gracious and friendly to opponents, audiences and golf enthusiasts. Playing an excellent game with true sportsmanship, she wins or loses smilingly.

LEADERS OF TODAY

Women of today in the medical profession have a great example in Dr. Florence Rena Sabin. She has, with courage, vision, and faith determined on a life work which serves humanity. Dr. Sabin, the first woman to reach a commanding figure in the field of medical research, is also the first to have received a full professorship appointment at Johns Hopkins, and the only woman to have been elected to the National Academy of Science. She is the first woman to be a full member of the Rockefeller Institute of Medical Research, which position Dr. Sabin fills at this time.

DR. FLORENCE RENA SABIN

LEADERS OF TODAY

Queen Elizabeth, Joan of Arc, Catherine the Great, Florence Nightingale . . . these are the great women of the past. However, in this twentieth century of progress in the United States alone, there are many to compare with these heroines. Judge Florence Allen, Dr. Florence Rena Sabin, Dr. Mary E. Woolley, Jane Addams, Frances Perkins—all are talented women, who, though not queens, are well known and justly famous. Each of these women in her chosen field has accomplished great things.

Women have a different place in the social world, and a new place in economic and political life. The girl of the sixteenth or seventeenth century learned to sew a fine seam, to dauble in paints, to write her name, and all the social graces of the day. She had few privileges outside of the home. However, today, women help to make the cogs and wheels of industry go. Many vocations are open to the modern girl. Law, medicine, philanthropy, art, music, science, diplomatic service, education and many other professions are filled by girls. Women are taking an active part in world affairs. Their ingenuity, freedom, leadership, and initiative are becoming apparent. The list of professions filled by women would compare favorably with a similar list compiled for men. The United States has many eminent women who are respected for their accomplishments, strength of character, and breadth of influence.

There is one art or vocation which has been the heritage of women for all time. This is the place of wife and mother. She manages the home, and cares for, loves, and teaches the children. There is a difference, however, in the way the art is practiced. Girls are trained in schools and taught the theory, as well as the practice of cooking, sewing, and household management. As a result, scientific household direction has superceded inefficient and haphazard methods. With improved equipment and labor-saving devices, the time spent on the actual work in a home is drastically cut. By a study of psychology, economics, sociology, or other social sciences, the homemaker is able to train her child and give him every advantage possible. There are more women concerned in this profession than in any other. In thinking of outstanding wives and mothers, the first thought is of Mrs. Roosevelt, who as wife of the President of the United States, fills her place admirably. Mrs. Coolidge also is one of the ideal homemakers.

Along with household duties, women have more time for other things because the time required for housekeeping is shortened by improved methods. As a result, girls may work in an office, or teach, or enter any desired profession, and at the same time keep up their duties at home.

Teaching, and old maids . . . it is time the two were separated in the minds of thinking people. The education of children should be given the honor which the profession is due, so that girls will not teach merely because there is nothing else to do. The guidance of children is a responsibility and an interesting life work. Some of the most alive persons intellectually and other wise are teachers. In schools and colleges all over the country are women and girls teaching. Few of them will receive any public acclaim, but many of them are remembered by the students. Doctor Mary E. Woolley is one of the greatest educators of today. She is President of Mount Holyoke College and is most successful in her chosen vocation. It is women of her type that deserve honor.

LEADERS OF TODAY

At one time, when plucking the petals of a daisy, the girl had very few professions from which to choose. Today there might be added to the list of professions available that of doctor, lawyer, merchant, consulting engineer, aviatrix, author, sculptress, jurist, stateswoman, educator, scientist, athlete, sociologist, beauticians, plumbers, and many others. If, like a small child, you closed your eyes and grabbed, you might get any one of these vocations and make a success of your life.

Should you be so lucky as to select medicine, you would have a fine example in Dr. Florence Rena Sabin. As doctor, anatomist, and scientist, she leads in the field of medicine. At present, Dr. Sabin is at the Rockefeller Institute of Medical Research. Many of the girls of today are nurses, X-Ray operators, or dietitians in hospitals. Other graduate nurses have left the hospitals and are in doctors' offices or are doing case work. County health nursing is an open vocation. Today, women are studying to be doctors as well as nurses. At one time this was unheard of, and for a long time the public had little or no confidence in women doctors. Also in the field of medical research, there is a place for the girls who are interested. Dr. Alice Hamilton is another outstanding woman doctor. In North Carolina, Dr. Bessie Lane, and Dr. Sylvia Allen are well known.

Should you be fascinated with the work of the lawyer or judge, who deals with human misunderstandings, life, and crime, you will not be looked down upon as your ancestor in the eighteenth century would have been. In a court room filled with people, the lawyer who can move jury and audience to pardon or convict has real power. Judge Florence Allen has the enviable honor of being the first woman federal judge in the United States. The contrast between the judge—a woman—and the time when women were not allowed to serve on juries is marked.

Jane Addams of Hull House is a nationally known figure. Because of her good works, she will always be remembered. The social workers and philanthropists of today best known are women—Jane Addams, and Martha Beery. Jane Addams' writings, speeches, and prophecies have made her one of the noteworthy sociologists of today. Miss Addams helps the poor. All are welcome at Hull House, a refuge among Chicago's noisy tenements. Thirteen buildings make up Hull House now, and included in them are pottery kiln, theater, cafeteria, clinic, library, and kindergarten. Her tolerance, courage, understanding, Christianity, and love of beauty, make Miss Addams one of the most-loved people anywhere. Martha Beery is also a worker for those who have few chances in life. She gives to the mountain children religious training and education in her farm college which has equipped over eight thousand boys and girls for intelligent living. Each student works for his or her education but the children get more than this—they get something of the fine, unselfish spirit of Miss Martha Beery. Another woman who has done much for children is Grace Abbott of the Children's Bureau. Child labor laws, child care and health are of vital interest to her, and she does all that she can to help the children of this country. These three women have brought love and help to the poor and helpless of the United States, and have made it a richer place—richer in human lives.

LEADERS OF TODAY

Among the subways, elevated, smoke, whistles, skyscrapers and hurrying traffic, women and men hurry back and forth from office to home. As business executive, or as secretary to some important person, women fill offices requiring educations, training, tact, and business ability. Librarians, stenographers, bookkeepers, typists, filing clerks, managers of stores—these are the women of today's business world. In the President's Cabinet is Frances Perkins, who as Secretary of Labor has a most responsible position. Also prominent as a business woman is Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt. Ruth Bryan Owen of the United States Diplomatic Service, who as a representative to Denmark, is a stateswoman of note. One woman, Mrs. Ferguson, was Governor of the State of Texas. At one time, it was thought silly for women to vote, but now women take as active a part in politics as men. There have been many women senators and representatives to the State Legislatures. In North Carolina, Mrs. E. L. McKee of Sylva, and Mrs. Lilly Mebane of Rockingham are both members of the Legislature.

Edna St. Vincent Millay, Mary Roberts Rinehart, Edith Wharton, Edna Ferber, Willa Cather, Eleanor Wyley—all are renowned authors of the United States. What other nation can boast such a large number of eminent authors? Edna St. Vincent Millay's poetry will never lose its appeal. "Fatal Interview," "Second April," and "Renaissance" are hers. Mary Roberts Rinehart has interested many with her mystery stories as well as with her stories of the old maids. Edna Ferber's novels, "So Big" and "Show Boat," have had wide appeal. Edith Wharton has written "House of Mirth," and "Ethan Frome." Willa Cather, who won the Pulitzer prize in 1922 with "One of Ours," has also written "Death Comes to the Archbishop," "The Professor's House," and "My Antonia." She portrays people just as they are. From South Carolina comes Julia Peterkin, who has written "Black April." America indeed has many famous women authors.

Often in magazines the picture of one of the girls of the gay nineties on a bicycle or playing golf or tennis appears, and the reader smiles at the picture presented. The girls of that day took very little exercise and how they dressed for it! To take the place of bicycling and croquet, are skiing, tennis, riding, golf, hockey, basketball, skating, swimming and diving, sailing and other sports that require skill and adeptness. Helen Wills and Helen Jacobs with rackets and balls in action are international sport figures. In golf, Virginia Van Wie, the winner of the National Woman's Golf Tournament for three successive years, is well known. Georgia Coleman and Eleanor Holm swim or dive equally well. Sports become careers for some girls of 1935, and other girls play "just for the fun of it," and become healthier and happier for it. One of the new sports is flying. Amelia Earhart has a fine record as an aviatrix. Miss Cora Sterling is the first aerial police-woman, and she patrols the skies for air regulation defenders. The girls of today do not have to faint for exercise.

From out of doors to concert hall, we go to find America's musicians, artists, and composers. Mrs. H. H. A. Beach is a musician with great ability, who composes, and entertains. Madam Ernestine Schumann-Heink has a voice lovely enough to make one forget one's self. Mrs. Crosby Adams, first of Chicago, and now of Montreat, North Carolina, is a composer and artist. The concert hall, opera, and the field of entertaining call many of the promising musicians who are being graduated from colleges and universities all over the nation. Some of the girls are interested in radio performances, and wish to play or sing on international hook-ups. Everywhere music is being enjoyed by those who listen as well as by those who entertain.

Long ago it was considered about the worst thing that a girl could do to "go on the stage." Now things are very different. The person who can make live characters of the past, move audiences to laughter or tears is truly an artist. Katherine Cornell, who has played in "The Barretts of Wimpole Street," "The Age of Innocence," and "The Green Hat," is famous. Ethel Barrymore is an actress with unusual talent. Minnie Maddern Fiske, Maude Adams, Julia Arthur, Jane Cowl, Ruth Draper, Eva Le Gallienne, Julia Marlow—these names of the bright lights are great favorites. On the moving picture stage are many stars—Greta Garbo, Myrna Loy, Marian Davies, and others of great magnitude. Those girls who can act, sing or dance are flocking to the western coast to enter the movies.

In the field of art, are Cecelia Beaux and Harriet Frishmuth. Cecelia Beaux has painted beautiful portraits. Some of them hang in the Luxembourg, and others in the Metropolitan. Harriet Frishmuth, the sculptress, has done delicate, interesting work. "The Fish Boy" is one of her best known works. There are other women artists who are etchers, portrait painters, landscape painters, or sculptors, and the field is open for more.

Few are the people who have not heard of Helen Keller. She works with the blind. She has written an autobiography which is seldom surpassed for interest or beauty of style. To hear one who has never heard or seen, describe a place or an object, a sunset or a peculiar sound, is little short of divine.

Some of the girls of today are interested in interior decoration as a career. Others want to be architects. Costume designing is an interesting field. Lillian M. Gilbreth is a consulting engineer. Some girls would like to be florists.

Two women of sterling worth and character, whom we admire for their quiet yet sincere and loyal service, are Miss Sarah Vest and Miss Ella Weinland.

There are innumerable positions open to the modern girl which were closed to the girls of the last century. In almost every vocation which you might mention, women as well as men may be found.

Hugo Munsterberg has said: "The American woman is clever, and ingenious, and witty; she is brilliant and lively and strong; she is charming and beautiful and noble; she is generous and amiable and resolute; she is energetic and practical; and yet idealistic and enthusiastic—indeed, what is she not?"

LEADERS OF TOMORROW

Lights—the play is on.
Curtain—the drama is no more.
But between these two, such people as Elizabeth Barrett of Wimpole Street, and Madame Ellen Olenska live for a brief time through the brilliant dramatic portrayals of these characters by Miss Katharine Cornell. To her is due honor and acclaim, for Miss Cornell is one of the truly great actresses of today.

"Do angels have wings, mother?"

"Yes, darling."

"Can they fly?"

"Yes, dear."

"Well, then, when is nurse going to fly? I heard daddy call her an angel."

"Tomorrow, darling."

Babbie: "How long do you sleep every morning?"

Rachel: "It all depends."

Babbie: "Depends on what?"

Rachel: "On how many classes I have."

THE COLLEGE GIRL

311 WEST FOURTH STREET
WINSTON-SALEM, N. C.

We all know that girl named McLean
Who gets after us when we raise Cain
We thought her hard-boiled
But we were all foiled
She was just a president.

There once was a girl called Carrol
Who's weakness was gaudy apparel
When it came to announcing
She mixed her pronouncing
And was her face red?
